Entrepreneurs: Gain priceless face time with dozens of leading venture capitalists, corporate developers, and other industry rainmakers, all while sizing up the competition.

VCs: Monitor emerging trends, breakthrough companies, and collect on-the-money strategies for making big exits.

Corporate developers: Meet maverick CEOs, suss out business plans for viability and profitability, and set the stage for new deals and partnerships.

You've read the headlines: Facebook's $15 billion valuation; the banding together of online properties to open up the Web; but what does it all really mean? What opportunities will businesses find as broader networks open up – better search tools, cooler widgets, bigger ad deals? How will smaller businesses carve out a moneymaking niche to call their own? And what issues will arise as consumer data moves from network to network?

Attend Web Ventures 2008 and join scores of Internet investment pros in a two-day brainstorm on financing and operations strategies. You'll connect with top media company executives, venture capitalists and corporate acquirers, and get a good, hard look at CEOs of start-ups with enormous promise, selected by the editors of VentureWire.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Magid M. Abraham | Co-founder, President & CEO, comScore

Provider of indispensable market research and data that outlines just who's out there and what makes them click, comScore is the Internet's preeminent tracker of user behavior and attitudes. Tune in to Mr. Abraham's address for metrics insights that will help you plan your media or drive new eyeballs to your business.

Parker Harris | Co-founder & EVP, Technology, Salesforce.com

From pioneer of SaaS in 1999 to development platform provider in 2007, SF-based Salesforce.com is now valued at a cool $7 billion. It aims to get even bigger, enabling customers to develop applications on its platform and connect and share information with other customers. Plot the points on that trajectory with Mr. Harris as he discusses the next phase of the company.

Reid Hoffman | Founder, Chairman & President, Products, LinkedIn

Provider of an online network for accessing people, jobs and opportunities, LinkedIn is the world's largest online professional network with more than 17 million members. Listen in as Mr. Hoffman details the next phase of the company. As a former executive of PayPal and an investor in companies including Facebook, Digg, and Wikia, he'll provide insight on the companies and technologies he sees leading the next evolution of the Web.
